January 31, 2011 Automate social media with Twerp Twerp helps you connect your existing Facebook, Twitter, MySpace, Flickr, and/or Jaiku profiles with services like Bit.ly, TweetMeme, StumbleUpon, and Furl. To get started, install Twerp as an administrator on your computer, open it, and sign into your accounts. Twerp will analyze the accounts, then show you an overview of what it can do. From here you can add more accounts to the dashboard. For example, you can add StumbleUpon URLs to Twerp. From the dashboard, enter a URL and it will analyze the web page to see if it is interesting. If it is, Twerp will add that page to the dashboard. You can search through the dashboard pages for more StumbleUpon links. January 29, 2011 Tumblr is the fastest growing social platform since its rise Tumblr is a popular microblogging website. It allows users to easily create blogs. The idea behind Tumblr is simple: users can have their own website where they can upload photos, videos, GIFs, and text. January 19, 2011 How Twitter is Changing the Business World Twitter is a great way to engage your customers, but it's not for everyone. Those who value privacy and a sense of control are probably best served by other communication and social networking services. That said, Twitter has become so popular that many people now use it to see what's happening online and how companies respond. Why Twitter is Useful Social Media is a big trend, but Twitter can be used in a lot of different ways. While most people use it to pass on updates, announcements, and other casual messages, it's a great tool for monitoring a discussion. Many companies are now using Twitter to get input from their customers and employees. Many companies are even using it to engage customers in the brand. Twitstat is a Twitter desktop application that lets you easily see the latest Tweets about your favorite subjects. For example, if you are a fan of clothing, you might have a favorite fashion blog.
