Dreamweaver Sooner or later, you're going to make the computer animated movie of your dreams, or at least dream about it. But to get started, you need a bit of software to create and manage the movie's different features. Dreamweaver makes it easy to create video-rich content for the web with HTML, CSS, and JavaScript. It also provides some basic page authoring for the web. It's primarily meant for web designers and web developers who want to create complex web pages or content. Dreamweaver has been the dominant page-authoring program in the WYSIWYG (What You See Is What You Get) design window for many years, but it's no longer the only option. You can create and edit HTML and CSS with any tool that enables you to compose and structure web pages visually. (And you can do all this without the design tool at all — so if you don't mind a little work, you can use a text editor for all page-authoring tasks.) Dreamweaver retains the title of the leading web page-authoring program, but as I mention in the preceding paragraph, there are many other programs that also do all that Dreamweaver does. Still, you can't use the term WYSIWYG without talking about Dreamweaver — so if you're reading this book, you need to know about Dreamweaver. ##

What's the Right Web Design Program for You? That's a question I'm asked a lot, so I thought it's worth exploring. Here's an overview of some basic features common to most web design programs, the pros and cons of each, and how they relate to working with Photoshop and Dreamweaver. The easiest thing to get started with is a web design program that enables you to create web pages the way you want them in the first place. My top two recommendations are

It's also a really great program to learn, because it is designed to teach you, and on top of that, it is a great tool for web designers because it helps you make good-looking Web pages. You'll need Adobe Photoshop Elements 10 or 11. If you prefer the newer version 12, you can still get the older version here. Of course, Photoshop Elements is free to use. The same information is there, but presented more simply and for a different audience. How to enable editing in Photoshop Elements If your version of Photoshop Elements does not already have editing enabled, you'll first have to go into the preferences and enable "editing." To enable editing, open the preferences dialog box (Window > Preferences). Click the "editing" tab. Check the box next to "editing". Photoshop Elements will now display the "edit" button under the image and "paintbox" button (see image below). Why do you need to enable editing if you are using PS Elements? In Photoshop Elements 10 and 11, a lot has changed in terms of how layers work and the user interface. To edit an image in the original version of Photoshop, you just drag a layer over an area you want to edit and then drag a new layer onto the image to complete the edit. Photoshop Elements handles layers differently. To edit an image in Photoshop Elements, you still have to drag an adjustment layer over the area you want to edit. You also need to select a crop tool, which is a feature new to Photoshop Elements. Edit an image in PS Elements 10 or 11 by making a selection then using tools and adjustment layers to make changes. Before we get started, I want to mention that if you want to learn how to create and edit images using Photoshop Elements, I strongly suggest using this book: Photoshop Elements 8 by Brad Lund, Brad Lund and Chris Orwig, Adobe Press, 2013 You might also like our Photoshop Elements Beginner's Guide Photoshop Elements is the only software that comes with a built-in photo retouching tool. To the Editor: Re "Will the Resistance Be Replaced by Unity?" (front page, March 9): I am fed up with the Resistance. The tax proposals of the Democrats have left me staring at my screen for days, wondering how to take them down. Our country is in a bad state, and I'm tired of shouting into the wilderness of useless legislation. To be honest, I'm not sure the Democrats or Republicans are ready to make this change. They have made their positions public, but are they ready to compromise with those with whom they disagree and make things work? Democrats, Democrats, Democrats and Republicans! In every state there are thousands of emails, calls and letters from citizens who want action. We all want something done about the tax bill! For this, politicians must see that they must govern, and not just bemoan a lack of cooperation. I'm fed up! ZENI KOTBERG New York The writer is a retired advocate.FRANKLIN CO. — A neighborhood soccer program is set to get a boost from the Hoosier Heartland and Indiana Association of Sports Officials. The Franklin County Soccer League will be recognized as the Indiana Association of Sports Officials (I.A.S.O.) Heartland circuit after just completing the annual I.A.S.O. Leadership Conference in Indianapolis. The Hoosier Heartland, the association's governing board, unanimously voted to recognize the FCSL as a circuit at the June 12 board meeting. Chad Barrett, president of the Hoosier Heartland, says while the association already recognizes 26 teams as its state circuits, it wanted to expand beyond the traditional state circuits, bringing more attention to the program and local initiatives. "We tried to find something that would be something that would do well and would do a good job to recognize the teams that are coming in and helping to grow soccer in our area," Barrett says. "We really have been trying to find something that was going to work in the long term and was going to help connect people and grow the game." As part of the circuit recognition, the organization will be issued three I.A.S.O. championships and each team will receive an I.A.S.O. lapel pin. "I really like how

Association of TrkB and Stat3 pathways with neuroregeneration following focal cerebral ischaemia in gerbils. In the present study, the expression patterns of 2 receptors, the tyrosine kinase receptor brain-derived neurotrophic factor receptor (TrkB) and signal transducer and activator of transcription 3 (Stat3), and their functional roles in neuroregeneration following transient middle cerebral artery occlusion in gerbils were investigated. The expression of TrkB and Stat3 was analyzed by Western blot and immunohistochemistry. TrkB, phospho-TrkB, Stat3 and phospho-Stat3 proteins were expressed in the brain at different time points after transient middle cerebral artery occlusion. The expression of TrkB and phospho-TrkB was increased in the ipsilateral cortex and striatum at the early phase of reperfusion compared with the sham group. No significant changes in phospho-TrkB or TrkB were observed in the ipsilateral cortex and striatum after a 24-h reperfusion. The expression of Stat3 was decreased in the ipsilateral cortex and striatum at the late phase of reperfusion. The expression of pStat3 was reduced at the later time points in the ipsilateral cortex and striatum after transient middle cerebral artery occlusion. The double immunostaining demonstrated that TrkB-immunoreactive cells were primarily distributed in the outer layer of the ipsilateral cortex and striatum at the early phase of reperfusion. Stat3-immunoreactive cells were mainly distributed in the cortex, striatum and thalamus at the late phase of reperfusion. In this study, TrkB and Stat3 were upregulated in the cortex and striatum at the early phase of reperfusion and downregulated in the cortex and striatum at the late phase of reperfusion. These results suggest that the TrkB and Stat3 pathways are associated with neuroregeneration.. The 68 million people who do not have medical insurance have little option but to pay out of pocket. They are paying for a lot of bad care. Other than for the most minor illnesses or injuries, people have no financial alternative but to pay for care out of pocket.
