"Dark Deception is an amazingly well made horror game. The combat is fun, the variety of enemies is superb and the atmosphere is outstanding! The game actually has a good scare factor since I found myself not wanting to turn the lights on. It is a damn good dark scary game! Need I say more?"- Wizardz "Pretty good and very realistic" - Gametraveler.com Story: The citizens of the city of Whitehaven were once plagued with nightmares unlike any before. The people believed it was the work of the cursed Sistine bloodline and demanded they be slain. The few remaining Sistine lived in hiding until the night their family grave was desecrated. The grave where the family was buried, along with the one that held a piece of the Sistine bloodline, was now empty. The monsters attacked the Sistine family that lived in hiding, slaying them all in an instant. The cursed bloodline was brought to Whitehaven and began to spread from those it killed. It's been some time since this plague hit Whitehaven and every day it seems to get stronger. The citizens have nothing, there are no weapons left to fight back. Without the Sistine bloodline to protect them, the citizens have a short time to live. During the night the citizens of Whitehaven dream of Agatha and the Gold Watchers. Each dream is the same but different - the only way to escape the nightmare. The citizens of Whitehaven, not knowing it's the dark, turn on their lights, leaving the Gold Watchers free to kill all who dare to step outside their walls. Game Features: • High quality 3D Graphics with special effects! • Haunting, scary, dark world to survive in! • Fast-paced arcade horror gameplay! • Colorful, vibrant environments! • Zombies, werewolves, spiders and witches in dark mazes! • Dozens of enemies to fight! • Power system, unlock new powers! • Mini-games throughout the game! • Dark humor! Story features: • You are the last of the Sistine bloodline and you must fight the city's nightmares to protect your family's graves. • You must endure two different types of nightmarish landscapes: the Goblin Village and the Gold Watchers' maze. • Face off against three different nightmares: Agatha, Captain Monk and the gold watchers. • Earn XP and unlock new powers as you progress. • Fight three c9d1549cdd

Right click on a can to throw them at a target. +1 can = Sharp Shot +2 can = Zap +4 can = Bounce +6 can = Shatter In melee mode, you can throw your can at an enemy to stun them for a short time. Be careful when casting, because the can can shatter to reveal your inventory. There are no solid supports, so a well-placed dash can turn the tide in your favor. Try to land a Zap or Bounce, because they both have a chance of blowing up and catching nearby enemies. When you throw a can at an enemy, you can also release a timer by pressing the square button as you throw. After you throw your can, you may have to defend, because it may be shot by an enemy. This can be done by walking close to the can, or if you are using melee, by dashing directly towards the can. Where to purchase: If you like the default colors of Absa, you can purchase the Make Your Mark Pack from the Steam store. Enjoy! --The Penguin Team Players who have already purchased this content (currently, no one else has) and is experiencing problems, go to Downloads from Steam. (If you purchased this content elsewhere, please go to the appropriate website for support.)Steam Customer Support and Downloads: I haven't played the game but I was sure offended by what Penguin Absa does to you, that is not necessary at all!! I don't understand either. Sure, the "can" do the damage while rolling, but it's just a throwable weapon with no effect, except for when you throw it. Then suddenly you're in a losing situation - unless you can rely on luck or an enemy reacting poorly. If you're close enough to throw the can and then charge in yourself, you'll lose through melee thanks to the slow charging and therefore, the slower speed of attack. Yes, it's the same when you throw it while swimming in a pool. You throw the can, then you begin moving. But you do not maintain your slow-moving momentum. You are moving only as fast as the cans are moving. This is why you end up in a disadvantageous position. The slow-moving momentum is the problem, not the can. The can is not relevant. If you want to run

What's new:

: 8 Ways the Right Hires Somebody They Know This is kind of kooky and full of insider baseball, but maybe you'll never see it coming. The next time you see the Hireals say a thing like, "I'm hiring a real political professional," think about the next time you see them say something like, "I'm hiring a real politician." There is no "real" here:

It's a matter of opinion, of preference, of unknown. What's constant about this word is that it's a proxy. Take a recently vacated House seat. Unpopular incumbent Republican: Pro Close childhood friend: Con Hardworking, sharp former staffer: Mildly favorable Overseas political acquaintance: Pretty decent Super-uber-close friend of a close relative who the candidate knows: Well, to be honest Politico's Burgess Everett recently explained a stark and remarkable truth about politics: In 2010 and 2014 alone, we learned that 35 percent of the top 50 House fundraising bundlers came from industries that have obvious business relationships with the office that is trying to raise money. As of the close of calendar 2014, the oil and natural gas industry donated $6.1 million to candidates. When we say that they donated, we don't mean that these companies gave out a ton of money. We mean that these donors gave a ton of money. In 2010 the top 10 federal political contributors from the oil and natural gas industry each gave about $100,000. In 2014 the top 10 GOP political contributors from this industry gave between $1.1 million and $1.5 million. Of those donors, 28 percent are people who accompanied the candidate to fundraisers. This is by no means a comprehensive list; one of the major duties of campaign fundraisers is to network across industries, and it's not a task easily supervised from a distance. But the last part of that top line is eye-opening: Neighborhoods function sort of the same way: The friend of your friend's sibling-in-law has more impact than the guy who just delivered you a pizza. These aren't just relationships that are formed through ordinary life, which is sometimes shot-through with petty jealousies and misunderstandings anyway. Instead, they're the stuff of political power: Not merely "political insiders"; not merely "politics heavyweights"; not merely ↵

The year is 2038. The world is dying. The land of Eroica, the largest continent on earth, is one of the most secure areas. A small town called Marche lives happily as a bridgehead on the edge of a huge forest. A small boy who resembles his grandfather in his youth is always alone and lost. His parents are away on business. He spends his days playing with the other kids and his evenings studying in a nearby library. One day, he comes across an old fortuneteller, who claims that he will become a great hero. It is a fine day for a young boy. Suddenly, chaos breaks out all over the world. He is now isolated and alone with his mysterious guardian and a mysterious girl. Together, they encounter a girl who is in search of her kidnapped brother. They are both caught in a desperate battle between good and evil. Now in a new world, will he survive to restore the world?
