A wave of positive surprises with the right tone of optimism, clearly showing the gradual recovery and progress of the industry. The industry recovered its momentum, and positive signs of momentum in the industry are growing. The PMI index of China's private manufacturing industry rebounded to 50.7 points in March, up 19.9 points from the previous month. Analysts' expectations are for a steady recovery, reflecting healthy, sustained growth in the market. This month marked the first time in three months that a sudden drop in orders registered by the industry did not result in a downward pressure on the purchasing managers' index (PMI) value of the industry. Moreover, the rebound of the industry was characterized by two aspects: First, the upgraded PMI value of the industry index was at a two-year high, and second, the pace of recovery in the industry was rapid. There were three bright spots in the industry this month. One was the recovery of the industry's momentum. Industrial output in March and the previous month had dropped to its lowest level in six years, but in March, industrial output rebounded 9.2 percent over February's value, marking the highest increase in monthly value since August 2012. This indicates that at least in part, the industry is on the road to recovery. Second, the new orders index for the industry was up 9.2 percent from the previous month
