I have a class hierarchy for which I would like to use PIMPL. The parent class is called MetaListObject and the nested class is called MetaPropertyGroup. A pointer from MetaListObject should be stored inside MetaPropertyGroup. It should also be legal to use MetaPropertyGroup objects in MetaListObject operations (like adding them to the list). So the inheritance hierarchy is like this: class MetaListObject { private: List propertyGroups; public: MetaListObject() { propertyGroups.Add(new MetaPropertyGroup()); } /* this should work with the following line of code: propertyGroups.Add(new MetaPropertyGroup(name)); / } class MetaPropertyGroup { private: string name; public: MetaPropertyGroup(string name) { this->name = name; } / make getters and setters for the members */ } The member function AddMetaPropertyGroup from b7e8fdf5c8
