Can't get program to automatically execute For practice, I made a program to type the word "AI" as many times as possible in five seconds, and I want it to automatically execute and show me what it was before each word was typed. Here is the code: `import sys import time print('-----'); start = time.time() print('This program will automatically type the word "AI" as many times as possible for five seconds.');` `print('Insert "AI" at the start of the words in your sentence below and hit enter.');` `sentence = input('>>> '); while time.time()-start >> ')` `break print(sentence)` When I press "start", it tells me "break" has no attribute. Why? A: The code looks a little weird. Here is a cleaned-up version with indents and comments: `import sys import time print('-----') start = time.time() print('This program will automatically type the word "AI" as many times as possible for five seconds.')` `print('Insert "AI" at the start of the words in your sentence below and hit enter.')` `sentence = input('>>> ') # This loop will break out while time.time() - start >> ')` `# This loop will continue as long as "ai" is not found while True:`
